Your appointments involve much more than just the time spent face-to-face with your clinician. Before your initial appointment, our clinicians spend time getting to know your needs, and planning the session. After the initial appointment, and for therapy appointments, they spend time reviewing information and assessment results, writing comprehensive file notes, setting meaningful goals, preparing for therapy, communicating with relevant parties, and planning future sessions. This additional clinical time helps us provide personalised and effective therapy and is included in our fees under non-face-to-face supports.
